Society Offices

The OHS offices contain exhibit rooms, climatically-controlled archival storage, library, board room and office space for on-site research. Persons wishing to do historical or family research are welcome and assistance is available from Society volunteers.

Financial Support

OHS depends largely on community support in the form of memberships and donations. Grants which support the operations of the Society are received from the Town of Oakville and Province of Ontario.

Donations to the Collection

OHS continues to expand its collection through donations. If you have papers or photographs of local historical interest please consider donating to OHS where they will preserved for all to study.

Books and Prints

We stock for sale titles covering Oakville history, harbours, ghosts, street names and sell a selection of Hitchcox prints.

Archival Collection

The Society has an extensive archival collection covering various aspects of Oakville history (including Trafalgar Township). The collection includes original documents, photographs, newspapers, maps, albums, ephemera, letters, diaries and reference books. Particularly noteworthy are

- A collection of over 7,000 photos of buildings, community life and families dating from the mid-nineteenth century.
- Forty diaries kept by George Sumner from 1867 to 1909 that provide insight into everyday happenings of the period.
- The R.W. Davis Memorial Library, a wide-ranging collection covering Canadian & world history and technical matters of ships and sailing.
